Paoli Introduces Kindle Laminate Casegoods Series

All models available built to order with two week shipping

Orleans, IN, June 2009— Paoli introduces Kindle, a laminate office furniture series with the combination of durability and good looks that works in administrative, customer service and technical service environments. Kindle coordinates with Paoli's recently introduced veneer series, Ignite, giving specifiers a workable solution for multiple applications that retains visual continuity.

Available through Paoli's inTWO program, any Kindle model can be built to order and shipped in two weeks, using any Kindle surface, edge or pull. Within the Kindle offering are both three-quarter and full pedestal models, plus an array of desks, P-top worksurfaces, conference extensions and a rich selection of storage. Components can be combined to create modular arrangements.

According to Kent Robbins, Paoli's Vice President, Marketing, the benefit of Kindle's laminate surfaces is two-fold. They coordinate beautifully with Paoli wood furniture graining characteristics and respond well to intense business activity from meetings, and document signing to project planning and presentation preparation. Kindle laminate tops have PVC edges offered in two profiles. Seven hardware styles are available in matte chrome or matte black finishes.

Paoli introduces Kindle as part of the recently formed Whitehall Collection. This product portfolio consists of high-value furniture including desk series, modular furniture and a full range of seating models for office, reception and conference applications. Styled in transitional and traditional themes, the Whitehall Collection offers wood and laminate surfaces, an array of finishes and laminate colors, and leather, fabric and vinyl upholstery for seating. The Graded In program, with choices from leading mills, expands upholstery options. All Whitehall Collection products are backed by Paoli's lifetime warranty and legacy of outstanding customer service.
